SIDNEY J. CASPERSEN
DIRECTOR, NJ COUNTER-TERRORISM OFFICE

An established member of the intelligence community, Sidney J. Caspersen has successfully handled matters of national security involving espionage and foreign intelligence surveillance operations. The Governor appointed him Director of New Jersey's Office of Counter-Terrorism in September 2002.

Mr. Caspersen spent nearly 25 years with the Federal Bureau of Investigation, most recently as Program Manager, Supervisory Agent, in the FBI's New York City office. In this post, he managed the Bureau's intelligence community support program, which included 60 FBI agents and 50 support staff members.

Among his prior positions at the FBI was Supervisory Special Agent, Russian Counter-Intelligence. His responsibilities included directing a highly-sensitive national and international investigation to identify, arrest and prosecute a KGB mole in the FBI. He also designed and implemented a covert recruitment operation.

At the FBI's New York Office, Mr. Caspersen served as Supervisory Special Agent for the Violent Fugitive Task Force and the Public Corruption unit. As the office's Assistant Chief of Special Operations, he supervised 340 law enforcement professionals. He also trained personnel from local, State and Federal law enforcement agencies, as well as from foreign police forces, in surveillance techniques.

In 1997, Mr. Caspersen received the Director's Award for Outstanding National Security Investigation from the FBI and the Outstanding Contribution to Law Enforcement Award from the Marine Corps Law Enforcement Foundation.
